

Clockulous Available Today for iPhone and iPod touch on the iTunes App Store

GOTHENBURG--September 10, 2008--Lingon i Korg Software Creations today announced that the company's fourth application for the iPhone and iPod touch mobile platforms is now available on Apple's iTunes App Store.

Watch your time.

To the meek: Don't get this application if you're not sure it is exactly what you want! However, if you are one of the many who really dislike the built-in clock--since it's way too small to see most of the time--read on.

Clockulous is simply nothing more than a large digital clock, showing the current time, as well as the current date. You can use it both in portrait mode (e.g. when your iPhone is in the dock) as well as in landscape (making the digits even larger and more visible).

"The built-in clock on the iPhone and iPod touch is simply too small to be usable," said Oskar Lissheim-Boethius, Lingon i Korg's Founder and CEO. "Clockulous lets you not only watch your time, with or without seconds. We also show today's date, and will in a future update display the week number as well."

Features include options to show or hide seconds and the date view, as well as several contrasting color schemes, letting you select the perfect fit for your viewing environment. (Includes Red on black and Black on red color schemes for light-sensitive environments.)

Pricing & Availability: Clockulous is available worldwide as of today in the iTunes App Store, for the price of $0.99 USD. (Local currencies vary.) The first five thousand (5000) copies will be given away for free as part of a promotion.
